“...the wisdom of respectfully knowing how to live well in a world worth living in.”

Welcome

On behalf of the Charles Sturt University community, it is my pleasure to invite you to celebrate this momentous occasion.

Graduation is an important milestone that marks the completion of your current studies and the beginning of a new chapter in your lives.

Your paths may be varied as you go on to take first jobs, promotions, research, perhaps another degree... but you all share something special. You are now lifelong members of the Charles Sturt University family.

As Australia's largest regional university, we are proud of the continuing contributions our graduates make to communities and the world around them. You too are ready to make your mark on this world.

I encourage you all to take forward the ethos of Charles Sturt University as you embark on your future endeavours – and apply the wisdom of respectfully knowing how to live well in a world worth living in.

Dr Michele Allan
Chancellor

Our ethos

Yindyamarra winhanganha. This is a Wiradjuri phrase meaning ‘the wisdom of respectfully knowing how to live well in a world worth living in’. It’s at the heart of everything we stand for here at Charles Sturt University.

It’s the reason we strive to create a world worth living in. It ties us to the First Nations Peoples whose land we are fortunate and proud to share, and to the diverse communities across Australia that we serve. It is also the driving force behind what we teach to, share with and learn from our students.

And it embodies the mission of our university, which is to develop and spread insight and knowledge in order to create a better future – through expanding educational opportunities, delivering exemplary career-focused courses and enabling original research. Because we believe in making a difference.

Our history

Our ethos, yindyamarra winhanganha, has been part of the Charles Sturt University narrative from the very start. Our history dates back more than 125 years, to the establishment in 1895 of a vocational farm at Bathurst designed to give rural people access to skills and education.

Over subsequent decades, agricultural and teaching centres were set up in Wagga Wagga and Bathurst, disseminating knowledge so individuals could improve their prospects and better serve their communities.

Charles Sturt University officially became a university in 1989, merging the former Mitchell College of Advanced Education and the Riverina Murray Institute of Higher Education, and incorporating educational facilities at Albury Wodonga, Bathurst and Wagga Wagga.

Since then we have continued to grow, and now give students from across Australia and the world access to quality university education.

Today we have campuses in Albury Wodonga, Bathurst, Dubbo, Orange, Port Macquarie and Wagga Wagga. We also have Charles Sturt University Study Centres in Brisbane, Melbourne and Sydney as well as study locations in Canberra, Goulburn, Parramatta and Wangaratta.

Our delivery of world-class online education is informed by more than 50 years of experience in distance learning. The majority of our degrees can now be studied online.

We have unique partnerships with a wide variety of organisations, including TAFE providers, the NSW Police Force, the Anglican Diocese of Canberra and Goulburn, the New South Wales Department of Primary Industries, Commercial Radio Australia, the Islamic Sciences & Research Academy of Australia, and universities in China and Sri Lanka.

We also have many partners around the world, enabling our students to undertake international study experiences, further expanding their horizons.

The man from whom the university takes its name – Charles Napier Sturt – was a British soldier who sailed to the colony of New South Wales in 1827 to pursue his passion for exploration.

The university mace

The Charles Sturt University mace is the symbol of the university as an independent academy of scholars constituted under legal authority.

The mace is crafted from timbers indigenous to the locations of Charles Sturt University campuses. It reflects the traditions and authority of the university, and symbolises its multiple geographies and responsibilities to the people of rural and regional Australia.

The university message stick

A gift from Dubbo City Council, this wooden message stick draws on elements of local indigenous culture to represent the entire Wiradjuri nation, whose borders encompass our campuses at Albury-Wodonga, Bathurst, Dubbo, Orange and Wagga Wagga.

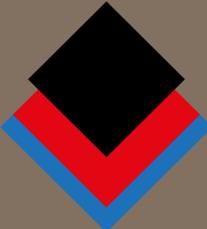

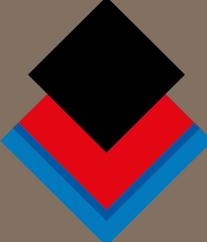

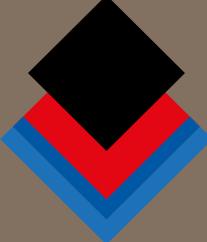

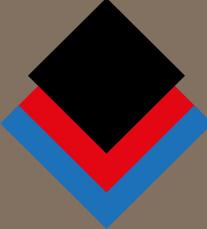

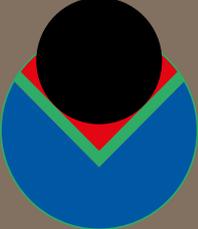

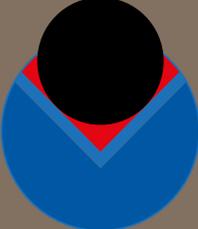

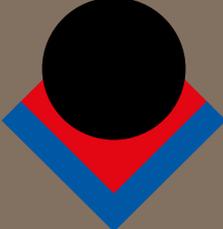

Young and old emu feathers, which hang from the mulga wood message stick, denote students of all ages. A possum painting represents the local Wilay Wiradjuri people and red ochre lines depict the Macquarie, Murrumbidgee and Murray Rivers on which the university's Albury-Wodonga, Bathurst, Dubbo and Wagga Wagga campuses are located.

Coat of Arms

The Coat of Arms bears the arms of the university at the centre. The helm sits above the arms showing a knight's helmet crowned with three golden stars atop which sits the crest – a lion holding three keys. The mantling is dressed in green and gold at either side of the helm and arms. 'For the Public Good', Charles Sturt University's motto, is inscribed to the motto scroll at the base of the arms.

The graduation ceremony

The Academic Senate recommends students to be admitted to degrees. Those students (known as graduands) will have successfully completed a course of study and the prescribed examinations. The University Council formally admits the graduands, approving conferral of award as graduates.

The university medals

Undergraduate University Medal

Awarded to our graduates from a bachelor's degree, in which at least 64 points of study in the course were completed at this university and whose GPA was 6.75 or higher.

Postgraduate University Medal

Awarded to our graduates from a coursework master's degree, in which at least 64 points of study in the course were completed at this university and whose GPA was 6.75 or higher.

Bachelor Honours University Medal

Awarded to one Honours graduate per faculty, who has completed at least 64 points of study in the course at the university, and who has achieved Class 1 as an overall grade for the Honours course. At least one examiner must indicate that the student's thesis or dissertation is at a level consistent with the award of a university medal.

Higher Degree by Research University Medal

Awarded to one doctoral and one master's by research graduate per faculty. At least two examiners must indicate that the graduate's thesis is at a level consistent with the award of a university medal.

Charles Sturt Medal

Awarded to one graduate annually who has both an outstanding academic achievement (including a GPA of 6.75 or higher), and has demonstrated a significant contribution to the public good consistent with the university's motto 'for the public good'.

We pay our respect to all First Nations elders both past and present from the lands where Charles Sturt University students reside. In particular, we acknowledge the Wiradjuri, Ngunawal, Gundungarra and Birpai peoples of Australia, who are the traditional custodians of the land where Charles Sturt University campuses are located.

Order of proceedings

The Charles Sturt University charge

As a graduate of Charles Sturt University, you are entrusted to:

- work collaboratively with others for the benefit of your profession and the community
- use the knowledge and skills you have acquired to live well and add to the nation's common wealth and to the public good
- remain connected to the university and your fellow graduates through the Charles Sturt University alumni network.

We pay our respect to all First Nations elders both past and present from the lands where Charles Sturt University students reside. In particular, we acknowledge the Wiradjuri, Ngunawal, Gundungarra and Biripai peoples of Australia, who are the traditional custodians of the land where Charles Sturt University campuses are located.

The academic procession will enter the hall with the congregation standing.

Tammy O'Connor

Bachelor of Nursing

Tammy O'Connor admits she is one of those rare and lucky people who knew early on how she wanted to make a real and lasting impact on this world.

I studied a Bachelor of Nursing at Charles Sturt University and I knew as soon as I started that I wanted to become a midwife. To me it seemed like such an awesome career.

After graduating I worked as a registered nurse and quickly enrolled in the Graduate Diploma of Midwifery at Charles Sturt while working in the maternity unit as a student midwife. The uni gave me a great platform to learn in a safe environment, and provided a good stepping stone into my career. That's why I completed a Master of Midwifery through Charles Sturt University. It opened the door to those higher level positions, including my current role as a clinical midwifery consultant for the Western NSW Local Health District.

“The beauty of nursing and midwifery is it can take you anywhere.”

Tammy's 'anywhere' turned out to be parts of NSW which rarely received the health and educational support services they required. Realising women in remote areas needed access to antenatal and postnatal care, Tammy has been instrumental in implementing an outreach maternity program.

I believe it's a basic human right for women to access a midwife during their pregnancy, regardless of their location. Working and living regionally provides me with the opportunity to work within the primary healthcare model of midwifery. It's what I love!

Courtney Glazebrook

Bachelor of Education (Birth to Five Years)

Courtney Glazebrook is creating new beginnings by treasuring the past. Passionate about First Nations education, she is driven to make a difference in the lives of young Aboriginal children by giving them the best start to their educational journey. As the director of Towri Multifunctional Aboriginal Children's Service, each day, when she opens the Towri doors, Courtney makes practical progress in her quest to cultivate a strong, connected and inclusive community.

Towri encompasses health, education, community engagement and family support. Early childhood care has such great flow on effects for families. While we're providing care for children we're also building platforms for parents, giving them the opportunity for employment and better health. We are building the capacity of whole communities. When children thrive so do communities.

I have the opportunity to create tangible change. What we do, what we teach and what we advocate for directly impacts upon the community and everyone in it. I have learned, through my Charles Sturt University studies and through my career, to question different regimes of truth.

“Aboriginal people are strong. We are connected. We are progressive. And at Towri we are creating new beginnings for those who come through. That really excites me.”

Chandan Rauniyar

Bachelor of Information Technology

Chandan Rauniyar has long been fascinated by the power of computing and the impact it can have on people's lives.

I have always been amazed by computers and what complex software could do. I was interested in software development and it seemed like such an awesome career – being able to develop complex computer software that is capable of transforming lives.

So I decided to study a Bachelor of Information Technology at the Charles Sturt University Study Centre in Melbourne. I majored in software development, learning about the principles of software development, data structures, and database design, as well as the ethics and security issues around computing.

With a little help from the Study Centre team, Chandan was able to step into his career at the cutting edge of software development with confidence.

After graduating, I managed to secure a scholarship for Study Centre Melbourne's Internship Program. With help from the careers team, I got selected as an intern at an IT company in Melbourne. As an intern, I was able to apply and develop my skills in the context of a small business. This invaluable industry experience helped me in then landing my first job as a software developer in a multinational company.

Dafydd Francis

Bachelor of Paramedicine

I want people to know the unprecedented worth of my scholarship. It went beyond monetary value. It saved my mental health. I was able to concentrate on the important things and not stress one little bit about money.

Uni is a tough gig. Juggling course requirements and placements, a social life, a couple of jobs and the everlasting battle with Centrelink (which can become more than a little tricky at times). But with the support of Charles Sturt donors and supporters, a huge amount of that burden has been lifted from our shoulders.

I believe that our gratitude should not only be shown with an offer of thanks, but by the way we carry ourselves through our university career – and in our actual career that will follow. Through our scholarships we've been given the opportunity to make the absolute best of our university experience.

You're always part of our community

Graduation is a momentous occasion. Your degree is officially conferred and you also join a very special community.

Today you become one of our Charles Sturt University alumni, joining more than 230,000 talented people across the world.

The Charles Sturt University alumni network is full of people just like you, working across countless industries, doing important and impactful work, who are happy to share their time and expertise with their fellow graduates.

As one of our alumni, if you choose to pursue further study, you'll receive a 10 per cent discount* on any fee paying postgraduate course at Charles Sturt University, plus a range of other benefits and support, including:

- access to our online library network
- professional development opportunities
- networking and social events
- career advice and support
- discounts at our dental clinics, allied health consultancies and veterinarian services
- discounts on Charles Sturt wine purchases
- access to on campus facilities in Albury-Wodonga, Bathurst, Dubbo, Orange, Port Macquarie and Wagga Wagga. These include libraries, computer labs, meeting rooms and sporting and social spaces.

There are so many reasons to stay in touch. To ensure you know about all alumni activities and offers, keep your contact details with us up to date.

Congratulations

On behalf of Charles Sturt University, I congratulate you on the successful completion of your studies.

While graduation is a little different this year having adapted to the challenges of COVID 19, you can take pride in your achievement as recognition of your hard work and dedication.

Learning is the product of an active collaboration among university students and staff. In acknowledging your contribution to the intellectual life of the university, I also recognise the commitment of our academic and professional staff in supporting our students to achieve the best in their studies.

Thank you for joining the Charles Sturt community as one of the newest members of our alumni. As alumni, you will have the opportunity to maintain and grow the professional and friendship networks that you have forged and will also gain access to member benefits enjoyed by thousands of our alumni around the world.

I am confident that your studies have equipped you to have a bright future, undertake a successful career and enable you to be an active citizen contributing to the public good.

Once again, congratulations and best wishes for the future.

The graphic on the left side of the page features a complex, layered geometric pattern of concentric, irregular shapes in various shades of green and teal. The pattern is dense and creates a sense of depth and movement. Overlaid on this pattern is the text 'Faculty of Arts and Education graduates' in a clean, white, sans-serif font. The text is arranged in four lines, with 'Faculty of' on the first line, 'Arts and' on the second, 'Education' on the third, and 'graduates' on the fourth. The background of the entire page is a solid dark teal color.

Preparing for the challenges of paracrisis in an online world: A case study

This thesis explores the emerging concept of paracrisis; a vulnerability for reputationally damaging events for organisations courtesy of digital platforms which can be used as tools or weapons for anyone with a smart phone. This research presents a model of paracrisis, explores the online immunisation paracrisis, and offers considerations for professional communicators designing strategies and utilising online platforms to communicate.

The role of the Tongan National Conference in the Uniting Church in Australia

The purpose of this thesis is to explore the role of the Tongan National Conference within the Uniting Church in Australia. It makes use of the methodology of a progressive theological reflection adapted to the Tongan cultural practice of 'rolling out the mat' (Fofola e fala). There is due recognition of how the Conference is an event: it argues the case for a more defined authority and role in the interconciliar nature of a 'multicultural' church.

For God so loved the world: Theology and the Australian Alpine environment

This DMin is an example of eco-theology, with a specific focus on the Australian Alpine region. It examines how God, understood as Creator, Redeemer and Sustainer, is embedded in and active within this environment. From such theology, practices were derived for appreciation and care of the environment, and for worship. Following this, a web-based curriculum with lessons, images, videos and resources was developed for teaching eco-theology in Anglican senior schools.

Toddlers with cleft palate: Enhancing communication through holistic child- and family-centred practice

This research investigated speech pathology practice to support toddlers with cleft palate from the perspectives of six experts from four countries and seven Australian families. Experts focused on impairments in body structure and function; families described both the joys and complexities of raising toddlers with cleft palate across the contexts of their lives. Findings highlight the need to shift from the medical model of practice towards holistic family-centred care.

A Study of undergraduate student uptake of library discovery tools

This research investigated the factors involved in undergraduate students' use of library discovery tools. It was found that students were more likely to use discovery tools for locating assignment-related information when these students used the catalogue, consulted their lecture notes, or required online book chapters. Students also used search engines such as Google and other library resources.

The spectrum of sound: Keyboard instruments and women in seventeenth-century Dutch painting

Art history since the Renaissance can be described as 'ocularcentric', or driven by vision alone. However, the modes of sound, silence, noise, hearing and listening are all depicted within seventeenth-century Dutch genre paintings of women with keyboard instruments. This thesis interpreted these sources on a spectrum of sound. This innovation contributed to perception studies in art interpretation to challenge how these pictures – and mottoes – convey information.

Folklore in contemporary Australian literature: Baba Yaga as guardian and mentor in antipodean narratives

'Folklore in Contemporary Australian Literature' is a doctoral thesis consisting of two components. The first is a creative piece exploring Australian culture through mythological and folkloric motifs. The second element is an exegesis which places the creative text in a comparative study of contemporary Australian literature repositioning myths and folk tales (particularly those featuring the nature-witch Baba Yaga) in the Australian literary landscape.

Hopeful lines of flight: Possibilities for reimagining pedagogy in the early years of primary school in Australia

Clare Britt's Hopeful Lines of Flight: Possibilities for Reimagining Pedagogy in the Early Years of Primary School in Australia chronicles her transformative research exploring the ways in which pedagogy is imagined and enacted in the early years of primary school. This case study explores ways that one school imagined what children, teaching and learning could be, and how these pedagogical possibilities were being enacted in the early years of primary school.

Towards a new model in employability development for mature-age professionals

Graduate employability has recently emerged as a topic of considerable focus. However, relatively little attention has been paid to the employability of older employees, aged 45-64. This thesis (re) defines individual employability and offers a self-directed learning model. Its value lies in providing a reflection space on what the employability agenda aims to achieve while providing a model for individual workers and educators to use for employability development.

Experiences of adventure therapy: A narrative inquiry

Will's research is the most substantial international exploration into individuals' experience of Adventure Therapy, including participants and practitioners of outdoor programs. Findings reveal that success is helped by the privileging of the democratic therapeutic relationship, and the avoidance of unethical practice in pursuit of program recognition. Will's research invites practitioners to reflect on the ethics and effectiveness of their outdoor therapy services.

Teacher education students' use of ICTs in teaching and learning on professional placement: investigating influences and development within the activity systems of university and schools

This study investigated teacher education students' use of ICTs in teaching and learning on professional placement. Applying Cultural Historical Activity Theory enabled the study to identify and explain an interdependence between the preparation program and schools for the TES' development of practice, and other major influences on use such as classroom practices, school student responses, technical and psychological tools, and a range of causal processes.

Different sides of the same coin? Cyberbullying and the positive uses of social networking: Examining perspective from culturally diverse youth

This research investigated how culturally-diverse Australian youth comprehend their lived experiences of cyberbullying when using social networking applications. Interpretative Phenomenological Analysis revealed differences in how Aboriginal, migrant and Anglo-Saxon youth variously defined, experienced and responded to cyberbullying. Results provide critical insights for adopting a youth-centred approach to future cyberbullying policy and education programs.

The scholarly activity of higher education lecturers in TAFE and the role of the TAFE library

Higher education is a relatively new and small part of Technical and Further Education in Victoria. HE lecturers are required to demonstrate scholarship yet TAFE libraries are set up to support vocational training. The research explores lecturers' scholarship and how TAFE libraries support it. Results demonstrate that libraries are not resourced to support scholarship and the emergence of HE in TAFE has had a positive influence on expanding collections and services.

Historical arguments and the narrative mode in vaccination objection communication: A critical discourse analysis of Facebook comments

Refusal of vaccination is a global problem, and research suggests current strategies to end such resistance are ineffective. This thesis explores how improved communication might increase acceptance of vaccination. It contains detailed analysis of arguments and language used by vaccination objectors on Facebook and explores new communication approaches for responding. Findings are relevant to both vaccination policy and wider science communication.

Building Bathurst: The story of those who built Bathurst and Central NSW 1815-1915

Graham Lupp's 2-volume thesis, Building Bathurst, 1815-1915, examines the work of seventy 19th century architects who built Bathurst and much of central NSW. As well as all their known buildings, the research covers their cultural and civic contributions, situating them in the changes brought by European settlement of inland NSW. In addition to newspapers and historic photos, Lupp's own architectural research, dating from 1967, greatly expanded previous histories.

Wait-lifting: Active waiting for speech and language services by children and families

This four-phase international research explored stakeholders' perspectives and solutions about waiting for speech and language services. Waiting was both active and passive and had negative consequences. A randomised controlled trial with 97 families found that using a purpose-built website to support waiting had similar outcomes to a control group. Evidence-based solutions are needed to reimagine service provision and promote timely, equitable access to services.

An agenda for joy: Rowan Williams's theology of conflict, unity and solidarity

This thesis explores a theology of conflict and disagreement through the work of the Anglican theologian Rowan Williams. It argues that conflict and unity are not opposed but are essential parts of the struggle for mutual recognition and solidarity. The thesis develops a theological concept of solidarity as a way of understanding the unity of the church as well as struggles for the common good in society.

The relational self in therapeutic relationship and the imago Dei: Towards an integrated psychotherapeutic and theological understanding of transformational healing and change in the process of psychotherapy

This thesis examines the relationship between therapist and client in psychotherapy. It integrates knowledge from psychotherapeutic literature, experienced Christian therapists and theology. The findings highlight the significance of the biblical concept of the human being made in the image of God (imago Dei) for understanding the transformative power of therapeutic relationship which arises from the dynamic unfolding and emerging identity of the self.

Stakeholder corporate social responsibility in the light of an African moral theory

The thesis evaluates ethically stakeholder corporate social responsibility (CSR), the view that business organisations have a duty to aid a variety of people such as workers, consumers, the poor and others. Up to now stakeholder CSR had been based on the dominant Western utilitarian and Kantian moral philosophies. In contrast, this thesis grounds a new kind of stakeholder CSR on African values, and argues that it should at least supplement, if not supplant, them.

Practices contributing to high STEM performance in rural Victorian secondary schools

This study showed that despite isolation and under-resourcing, some rural Victorian schools succeed in Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics (STEM) education. Contributors to STEM success were investigated at four schools. STEM teachers worked as self-reliant teams, used community relationships and resources to deliver rich lessons, and held high learning expectations while giving students extensive support, providing a model for other rural schools.

Overhearing ten canoes, The Tracker and Charlie's Country. Theology in dialogue with the collaborative films of Rolf de Heer and David Gulpiill

Australian films and filmmakers have received little attention in film and theology research. In response to this situation, this thesis provides a theological dialogue between the films of Rolf de Heer and David Gulpiill, the theologian Willie James Jennings and Indigenous theology. The dialogue illuminates the impacts of colonialism in Australia and provides new ways of imagining relationality between peoples, and between people and the rest of creation.

The end of singleness? Towards a theological retrieval of singleness for the contemporary Christian Church

Using Scriptural exegesis and historical theology, this thesis reformulates an account of being single. It finds that the single life has teleological purposes and ends that accord to its inherent dignity and meaning, as opposed to cultural narratives of deficiency, defect or even deviancy. Rediscovery of the critical significance of the single Christian life is found to enrich each unmarried individual, the Church as a whole, and wider society.

The provision of movement experiences in Australian early childhood curriculum: Examining educators' practices and children's participation in physically active play

This research explored the complexities of how educators incorporate physical activity and Fundamental Movement Skills into the preschool curriculum. An in-depth analysis of outdoor environments, children's play and educators' practices in three early childhood centres highlighted the role of educators' personal beliefs, leadership by the centre director, and the organisational culture of the centre in promoting children's engagement in physically active play.

On the vision of God: An historical and theological inquiry into the significance of Nicholas of Cusa's De visione Dei for Christian theology of religions and inter-religious dialogue

This thesis establishes that De visione Dei is a rich yet underutilized resource for Christian theology of religions and interreligious dialogue by examining Cusa's contention that God is known best via a multiplicity of perspectives, then presenting warrants to justify deploying the text as a resource for interreligious engagement, and finally applying De visione Dei to a contentious issue for Christian theology of religions, 'Pluralism vs Particularity'.

Rural rites: Women's experience of funerals and remembrance on Lower Eyre Peninsula in the post-1960s era

This thesis, in the field of regional history and contemporary history, gives an analysis of women's experience of mourning rites. The Lower Eyre Peninsula is the focus, but information about the history of funerals in all of Australia is included. The thesis finds significant changes have taken place in recent decades, and secularism, equal participation by women, and individualistic rites are important themes in contemporary Australian funerals.

Informed learning practice in a secondary school: A participatory action research case study

This thesis reports a multiple case study involving secondary teachers using Participatory Action Research to explore use of informed learning ideas to bridge the historic gap between theory and practice of information literacy education. Its findings show that Informed Learning PAR can deliver transformative professional learning, of significance for schools seeking to change teacher practice so students learn expert information use as part of subject learning.

Transactional analysis in organisations: A case study with a focus on internal communication

Transactional Analysis in Organisations: A Case Study with a Focus on Internal Communication is an organisational study exploring the impact of TA principles on policy and workplace practices. Analysis highlights how TA enhances the social-technical organisational system. When placing emphasis on a human perspective, developing individual skills and a desire to accept others, an organisation is better placed to achieve a more meaningful role for wider society.

*Does Sustainable Leadership Make a Difference?
Examining Corporate Sustainability in the Australian Manufacturing Sector*

The aim of this study was to understand whether leadership behaviours of leaders in the Australian manufacturing sector differed to those in Australia's most sustainable companies. Although no significant difference was found, this empirical research, which used surveys and in-depth interviews, provides further evidence that external factors, such as reputation, play a greater role in corporate sustainability than previously thought.

Elisabeth Christina Chapman

*Connecting Leadership and Emotional Labour in the Work of Call Centre Operators: A Qualitative Study of Work Interactions and Performance of Child Protection
Assessment Officers in the NSW Child Wellbeing Units*

This thesis seeks to understand the performance of leadership work that arises from and further contextualises the emotional labour of child protection assessment officers working in high-quality call centres in the NSW public sector, Australia. The study explores the performance of emotional labour during telephone consultations regarding child safety and highlights the complex relationship between emotional labour and leadership.

John Edward Somerville Lawson

Exploring the organisational effectiveness of not-for-profit organisations: Empirical evidence from the social services sector in the Australian Capital Territory and New South Wales.

This research explores the need for more accountability, transparency and accessibility of outcomes information within the not-for-profit social services sector in NSW and ACT. Based on the insights gathered from both the sector's senior executives and stakeholders, research recommends uniform measures focused on outcomes accountability, governance and capacity resulting in a star rating to inform potential clients, carers and stakeholders of the effectiveness of organisations and enable comparison with best practice.

Moving Forward: Employment Post-Service for Australian Uniformed Professionals in the Defence Force, Police, and Emergency Services

Moving Forward is a study of former Australian police, military and emergency services personnel. The study investigates the extent to which an identity connection to former employment influences job satisfaction post service for these members. The findings revealed a strong connection to the service role which left members isolated and disoriented upon separation. The study introduced post service identity theory to explain the experience of these individuals.

The Detection of Movement-Related Disease by Changes in Keystroke Characteristics While Typing

Parkinson's Disease is a degenerative movement disease affecting 6 million people worldwide, but has a high misdiagnosis rate because there is not any definitive test. This research investigated whether the finger rhythms as people type on a keyboard can be used to accurately diagnose the disease, even in its early stages. The methodologies resulted in a high detection accuracy and provide the basis for development of a diagnostic and monitoring app for Parkinson's.

Michael Donevski

Cyber Diversity Index for Autonomous Anomaly Management

The Cyber Diversity Index is a measurable dynamic behavioural profiling with entropic anomaly detection to assist autonomous management of unknown system changes. This study demonstrates that it is possible to monitor a system's behavioural profile using the Shannon-Wiener Index and detect anomalies caused by zero-day attacks. The significant consequence of the CDI is the sustainable assurance of the system's intrinsic purpose with integrity defined as self-control.

Sandra Louise Gallagher

A Framework to Study the Effect of Service, Delivery, and Quality on the Implementation of eLearning Information Systems

The research explored the use of a management framework which assists educators with the integration of technology in the classroom. The study proposed an adapted use of the Information Technology Infrastructure Library framework, integrated with associated learning taxonomies, as a mechanism for successful technology integration. The results indicated this combination leads to better student learning outcomes.

Georg Adam Thomas

Issues of Professionalism Concerning the Ethical Hacking of Law Firms

The thesis explored professionalism by ethical hackers engaged to test and validate the security of law firms in Australia and the USA. Analysis of interviews with people in legal and cyber security roles resulted in identifying the need for improved professional standards and codes, and the development of a framework designed to assist in mitigating identified risks to these law firms.

Utility of Predictive Policing: Evaluating a Spatial-Temporal Forecasting Model in an Operational Deployment

The study involved an evaluation of a predictive policing pilot project implemented by the Vancouver Police Department. The study was designed to offer guidance for police services considering adoption of this technology. The role of big data, machine learning, and artificial intelligence in forecasting, as well as its potential benefits and concerns were discussed, with a focus on data integrity, ethics, and the human components of predictive policing.

Doctor of Philosophy

Intelligence Support for Tactical Policing: Intelligence Preparation of the Battlespace

A study that tested the proposition that intelligence preparation of the battlespace (IPB) doctrine can be a model for enhancing intelligence support to police tactical groups (PTG). The study found IPB offers the potential to enhance the utility of PTG intelligence under certain conditions: principally in relation to factors of completeness and detail; and those involving longer-term operations; and those involving interoperability with the military.

Mohammad Mozammel Hoque Chowdhury

A Robust Multimodal Biometric Scheme for Human Recognition and Authentication

This thesis develops a robust and secure multimodal biometric scheme using face and ear features and measures the effectiveness of the methods using various machine learning algorithms. The empirical evaluation demonstrates a significant improvement compared to the accuracy through any individual biometric recognition. The thesis further studies the hybrid neural network approach to recognize and authenticate the person using face and ear recognition.

Tharntip Chutikulrungsee

A Phenomenological Study of Other-Generated Disclosure in Online Social Networks

This first study of its kind has examined interdependent privacy arising from other-generated disclosure. In social networks, users reveal information not only about themselves but also about others. This phenomenological study reported findings from the perspective of both, the discloser and the disclosee. Prior to this study the focus has been on privacy arising from self-disclosure. The study raised awareness about loss of privacy from other-generated disclosure.

Daisy Gemayel

Development and Validation of Multidimensional Paternal Conceptual Scale(MPPS)

This thesis developed the Multidimensional Paternal Perinatal Scale (MPPS), which includes two versions (i.e. antenatal version and postnatal version). The MPPS is a valid and reliable tool that assesses paternal perinatal well-being. Clinicians can use this scale to identify fathers at risk of developing emotional problems and also have information to target factors impacting fathers' emotional well-being during therapeutic intervention.

Indigenous Perspectives of Social Marketing

It is the argument of this thesis that the inherent structural power relationship between Indigenous peoples and change agents (government, authorities and service providers) affects the success of social marketing in healthcare contexts. The findings demonstrate that it is vital to consider the situational context and power relationship between those advocating change and those effected by change.

Muhammad Jafer

Secure and Efficient Broadcasting Communication System in Vehicle Ad-hoc Networks

Secure broadcasting of messages in Vehicular Ad-hoc networks is used for a variety of applications such as advertisement, entertainment, business and many more. This research is focused on developing architecture and algorithms to disseminate such messages between vehicles in a secure and efficient manner. It is shown that the proposed method achieves quick network coverage, reduces message retransmissions and provides enhanced security for the transmitted messages.

Bharat Raj Poudel

Criteria for Sustainable Operation of Renewable Energy-Based Mini-Grid Services

The thesis develops a theoretical model of project attributes that contribute to the sustainability of renewable energy-based mini-grids in Nepal. Five of these attributes drive electricity demand and the other six help to ensure reliable power supply to meet the demand in those communities. Mini-grids, with consistent stability of power supply and demand, can maintain a self-reinforcing economic cycle in the villages, and thus, achieve more sustainable outcomes.

Privacy Protection of Online Social Media Users from Malicious Data Miners

Sensitive information of social media users can be inferred through data mining, even if a user hides such information. Attackers can build a decision forest from a data set containing users' information to learn general patterns which they can then use to infer the target users' hidden information. This thesis presents techniques that can protect the privacy of target users by suggesting them to hide some non-sensitive information and modify some friendship information.

Best Practice in Counterinsurgency: Conditions and Capabilities Required for Achievement of Optimum Effectiveness

This thesis examines from an empirical perspective, key organisational capabilities required for achievement of mission success in counterinsurgency. It includes new field data drawn from several operational contexts. The resulting data analysis, when viewed against the literature review within the work, has provided significant new insights informing developments in doctrine, public policy and elements for the achievement of best practice in counterinsurgency.

The Impact of Entrepreneurial Ecosystem Factors on Financial Performance of Small and Medium-sized Enterprises in Australia

The aim of the study is to assess the impact of entrepreneurial ecosystem factors on SME financial performance. Data were collected from 512 SME owners from urban and nonurban ecosystems in New South Wales, Australia. Findings show that the significance of entrepreneurial ecosystem factors differs based on SME location. Implications for the development of the entrepreneurial ecosystem and regional entrepreneurship development policies were proposed.

An investigation of the impacts of mining projects in Papua New Guinea on livelihoods and poverty in indigenous communities

Mining in Papua New Guinea is often associated with adverse outcomes for the indigenous peoples. Applying economic analysis, the thesis examined the impact of two of the largest mines – Ok Tedi and Porgera, on the livelihoods of the local population. The results showed small, but significant improvements in living standards, particularly at Ok Tedi. There were higher levels of education, food consumed and food quality, and more household appliances in the mining communities.

Doctor of Police Leadership

Police Corruption may be inevitable, but is it foreseeable?

This research looks to determine whether the “Continuum of Compromise” correctly describes the transition of a police officer from being honest to being compromised and how this transition may be identifiable and even predictable. The findings support the Continuum which parallels the experiences of all participants of this research. The significant finding of this research is that some police corruption is predictable.

Doctor of Policing and Security

The right fights: How should intervention forces approach insurgencies?

This study examined international forces’ approaches to insurgencies when intervening to stabilise weak states. It found that directly targeting insurgencies may be necessary, but risks increased conflict and crime, perpetuation of unstable regimes, and loss of intervening powers’ resolve. It proposed reducing these risks by deploying enough force to maintain security, minimising direct conflict, and offering all parties legitimate avenues to their desired outcomes.

Investigation of epidemiological and molecular factors associated with septic synovial structures in horses.

Factors associated with survival and return to function in horses with synovial infection in an Australian context were reported, supporting evidence-based clinical decision making. Research of molecular techniques for the diagnosis of synovial infection provides new information on the diagnostic performance of these methods. The thesis contributes important knowledge regarding outcomes and diagnostic strategies to optimise welfare in horses with synovial infection.

Christopher Owens

A comparison of two equine castration techniques

Castration methods and complications in horses were explored. Preferences, experiences and outcomes of Australian veterinarians were reported. The types and rates of complications did not differ between methods. The research findings provide valuable contributions to the epidemiological understanding of equine castration in the Australian context and contribute important knowledge regarding outcomes and strategies to optimise welfare in horses undergoing castration.

Conservation biological control in brassica crops using Australian native plants

Conservation biological control involves manipulating farm habitats to promote the beneficial insect species that attack insect pests. Laboratory and field studies showed that adult lifespan of beneficial insects was increased by access to specific Australian native plant species. Growing these plants close to brassica crops led to suppressive effects on pests that potentially reduce farmers' reliance on pesticide application.

Strong men: Aboriginal community development of a cardiovascular exercise and health education program.

The study 'Strong Men: Aboriginal community development of a cardiovascular exercise and health education program' evaluated the impacts of a culturally appropriate exercise and health education program on risk factors associated with cardiovascular disease, and explored Aboriginal men's experience of the program. Using a strengths-based approach, this research makes a valuable contribution to improving Aboriginal men's health and wellbeing outcomes.

Investigating the aetiology, pathogenesis and mitigation of perennial ryegrass toxicity using ovine and murine models.

This thesis evaluates the efficacy of bromide for treatment of Perennial Ryegrass Toxicosis (PRGT). Ovine and murine disease models of PRGT were developed and used to assess bromide as a PRGT treatment, demonstrating that bromide is effective at reducing both tremor and ataxia. By demonstrating its efficacy, high safety margin and good oral bioavailability, the results of this thesis lead to bromide receiving a patent as a therapeutic for this important disease.

The effects of hypohydration and thirst on cognitive performance and mental fatigue

A popular belief is that dehydration may compromise cognitive function. However, this thesis indicates that even at losses of up to 2.5% of body mass, executive function, attention, learning and memory are preserved. Thirst rather than losses in body mass may be a more pertinent stimulus that should be avoided in relation to cognition. Findings of this thesis have been published in the Journal of Cognitive Enhancement, Physiology and Behavior, and Neuropsychologia.

Impact of germination on yellow pea flour functionality

This study evaluated the impact of germination on the functionality of yellow pea flour (YPF) and its various fractions. The study indicated that a 6 day germination period induced changes in protein molecular weight distribution, water solubility, particle size distribution and starch surface structure. These changes resulted in an increase in water solubility, peak viscosity, gel strength and decreased hydration properties. The results suggest that modification by germination can produce changes in the functional properties of YPF that will increase its value in the food industry.

Seed contamination in sheep carcasses by barley grass: an analysis of prevalence, management and economic impact

This project investigates the prevalence, causal factors and optimal weed management associated with barley grass seed contamination in sheep across southern Australia. Contamination rates in sheep varied across states, regions and years and with sheep age and sex. Integrating optimally timed mowing with herbicides at low weed densities, maximised lamb enterprise profitability, highlighting the value of integrated weed management in lamb production systems.

Entomopathogenic fungi as potential biocontrol agents of grape phylloxera

Entomopathogenic fungi from Australian vineyard soils were investigated for their potential as biocontrol agents of grapevine phylloxera. Methods were established to examine efficacy, with 100% mortality achieved when a selection of the entomopathogens were applied to green peach aphid, a model insect. However mortality was not achieved for phylloxera. Differential gene expression may explain some of these differences, paving the way for future studies.

Plant performance and secondary chemistry in selected annual pasture legumes in southern Australia

The chemistry, weed suppression and performance of novel annual legumes in southern Australia was evaluated. Arrowleaf clover and biserrula proved most competitive with annual weeds due to early canopy closure and high biomass production. Biserrula and yellow serradella also released phytotoxic flavonoids in high concentration in rhizosphere soils. Importantly, low levels of phyto-estrogens were found in foliage, with the exception of bladder and gland clover.

Lived experiences of regional Australia new graduate nurses: Enhancing caring practices

The first year of practice for New Graduate Nurses is an intense period of professional growth & development. They are simultaneously being & becoming registered nurses; learning to cope in the workplace, navigating uncomfortable silences, ascribing meaning to professional experiences & integrating a professional role into their life. This phenomenological study contributes a deeper understanding of New Graduate Nurses' experience of professional becoming.

Exploring occupational participation, choice, and opportunities of regional on-campus university students who have recently transitioned from secondary school

This qualitative occupational science study explored the occupational participation, choices and opportunities of regional young people transitioning into a university student role. The findings helped develop a theoretical model, the Occupational Role Transition Model, which conceptualised the relationship between occupational role transition, health and wellbeing. This model may be utilised with other populations groups experiencing occupational role transition.

Reimagining selves, liminal tourism spaces as sites for lifestyle migration. An exploration of the reflexive narratives of tourism business owners in Niseko, Japan.

This research provides insight into how participation in tourism businesses can facilitate lifestyle migration and how individuals in tourism spaces relate to place and are influenced by it. Narratives from tourism business owners in Niseko, Japan revealed how experiences of living overseas can influence individuals to establish alternative lifestyles in tourism spaces, underpinned by the desire to live in a way that is more congruent with their sense of self.

Value chain analysis of root and tuber crops in Delta State Nigeria: Implications for healthcare

This study focused on consumers' appetite for imported vs. indigenous crops, considering diabetes and cholesterol management. Value chain analysis shows chain actors unaware about their product's health values, hence misconceptions around their products and consumers. This study adds to previous research work on cassava and significance of PhD is analysis of data to address marketing issues and strategy for health economics of cassava.

The physiology of self-paced exercise: Pharmacological intervention and cell stress response in the heat

The thesis titled The physiology of self-paced exercise: pharmacological intervention and cell stress response in the heat, examined the effects of dopamine and noradrenaline reuptake inhibitors and oral contraceptives on fatigue during exercise in the heat. The thesis found these drugs can potentially override signals to the brain to adjust exercise intensity. This can have a dramatic effect on health and well-being during exercise. The findings have been published in the internationally renowned Journal of Thermal Biology

Aspergillus species associated with Australian wine grapes: Implications of fumonisins for grapes and wine

This thesis demonstrates the production of the mycotoxins, fumonisins by strains of some species of the fungus Aspergillus responsible for wine spoilage. Fumonisin production was greatest in isolates grown at 20 °C and a water activity of 0.98. Vinification of grapes contaminated with Aspergillus resulted in some removal of fumonisins. Levels of fumonisins further degraded during wine storage. The findings have practical implications for sustainable wine production.

The investigation of Campylobacter colonisation of free range chickens

Campylobacter is a bacterial pathogen that causes human enteric infections often linked to consumption of contaminated poultry products. In this study, the potential sources and genetic diversity of Campylobacter in commercial free-range poultry farms in NSW were investigated and potential Campylobacter vaccine antigens were characterised. Data from this study are important to develop strategies to prevent Campylobacter colonisation of poultry on commercial farms.

Rheumatoid arthritis and risk of infection: The role of disease modifying anti-inflammatory drugs

This research investigated the relationship between medications and development of serious infections in arthritis (RA) patients. Statistical methods were used to analyse data obtained from the Australian Rheumatology Association Database (ARAD). 3569 RA patients during 2001-2014, were investigated for infections. We found that serious infection was more common in RA patients than in the general population and anti RA medications have different impacts on infections.

Changes in Australian wheat quality over the last 150 years

Changes in protein composition and baking characteristics of Australian wheat varieties released between 1860 and 2015 were investigated. Findings suggested that typical grain protein content of varieties released during this period decreased over time due to a dilution effect caused by improvements in yield. Selection of superior grain quality alleles has compensated for the decrease in grain protein leading to improved bread making quality.

*An investigation of personality in the domestic ferret (Mustela putorius furo)*

Animal personality research examines stable and persistent differences in behaviour between individuals. By using different methods to assess personality, Sarah revealed that ferrets have four personality dimensions; Extraversion, Sociability, Attentiveness and Neuroticism. Her research also highlighted the influence of context on dimension scores, and has applications in tailoring ferret care and management to personality traits in order to enhance ferret welfare.

The role of PGRMC1 in cell biology and pancreatic cancer tumourigenesis and a novel mechanism for fibril formation from Acot7 protein

Two independent studies are presented. The first study investigated the role of PGRMC1 in pancreatic cancer cell biology using a mouse model and involved identification of PGRMC1 binding proteins. The second study investigated amyloid fibril formation from ACOT7 protein, which is highly expressed in the brain and plays an important role in inflammation. The structure of Acot7 is presented and a novel mechanism for fibril formation is proposed.

Diagnostic performance of lung perfusion and CTPA for CTEPH in Southeast Asia

Investigation of suspected Chronic Thrombo-Embolic Pulmonary Hypertension (CTEPH) includes clinical and pre-test probability assessment, and diagnostic imaging with computed tomography pulmonary angiogram (CTPA) or ventilation / perfusion lung scintigraphy (V/Q). This study investigated the efficacy of V/Q and CTPA in diagnosing CTEPH in a Southeast Asian (SEA) population. The results indicated superiority of V/Q over CTPA in diagnosing CTEPH in the population.

The nature of clinical decision making by clinical dieticians in the acute care setting

This thesis reports on qualitative research that sought to contribute a deeper understanding of how experienced dietitians make clinical decisions in an acute health care environment. Findings revealed how dietitian decision making includes strong contextual, judgement and interpersonal dimensions that help facilitate sophisticated and situation-dependent patient care. This research will be used to influence the education and development of dietetic practice.

Gastrointestinal nematodes infecting water buffalo: a comparison between Australia and Pakistan assessing species identification, prevalence and farming systems.

This thesis explores some epidemiological components of gastrointestinal nematodes infecting water buffalo in Australia and Pakistan. Results supported an overall low likelihood of gastrointestinal nematode infection but highlighted several management practices and animal characteristics that influence infection prevalence in both countries. In addition, potentially novel gastrointestinal nematode species were reported, prompting the need for further research.

*The epidemiology and impact of hydatid disease (Echinococcus granulosus) in beef cattle in Eastern Australia*

This thesis investigated the importance of hydatid disease to the Australian beef industry. The findings demonstrate that accuracy of abattoir data collection needs to be improved to facilitate both surveillance and research. Improved knowledge and awareness of hydatid disease among Australian beef producers is required, and practical and cost-effective control measures need to be identified.

Impacts of viticultural conditions and juice composition on the oxidative and reductive development of wine

The impacts of viticultural-related parameters on the aging of wine were examined. During the investigation, novel analysis techniques were developed for the improved measurement of aroma compounds, and important links were identified between wine composition, at various stages of aging, and key viticultural parameters of grape production. This research provides new insights into the link between grape-growing conditions and the aging of wine.

Ecological engineering for pest suppression: Promoting parasitoid wasps using nectar plants

Ecological engineering for pest suppression uses vegetation management to promote beneficial insects such as parasitoids, wasps that attack pests. This thesis developed a new approach for selecting the best types of vegetation for use in the margins of rice fields and deciding which types of parasitoids was most effective for. Future efforts to implement ecological engineering now have a stronger theoretical basis and a more efficient pathway to impact.
