MASTER OF ARTS (INTELLIGENCE ANALYSIS)

Why study CSU’s intelligence analysis program?

Charles Sturt University's (CSU’s) intelligence analysis program is ideal if you are working as an intelligence professional in the law enforcement, national security, public or private sectors. This course provides you with the opportunity to undertake studies at postgraduate level through CSU’s Australian Graduate School of Policing and Security.

Intelligence analysis is a field experiencing significant growth, with a high demand for skilled professionals. Build your analytical skills across recent issues and events to form predictive strategies that support strategic planning and prioritisation of resources.

This course is part of an articulated program of study. Articulated programs allow you to build on your study to achieve the right level of qualification for you.

What is CSU’s intelligence analysis program?

Master of Arts (Intelligence Analysis)

CSU’s Master of Arts (Intelligence Analysis) will give you the opportunity to successfully complete a research dissertation or a special studies project, adding your own distinct contribution to knowledge in the intelligence field. You can also choose free electives from the terrorism, safety and security, leadership, investigations, fraud and financial crime prevention, emergency management or anti-money laundering / counter-terrorism financing programs.

Graduate Diploma of Intelligence Analysis

Our Graduate Diploma of Intelligence Analysis gives you the opportunity to further specialise in various aspects of intelligence practice, including intelligence management, national security intelligence, strategic intelligence, and imagery and geo-spatial intelligence. You can also select electives relevant to your course including fraud and leadership, management and counter-terrorism.

Graduate Certificate in Intelligence Analysis

Our Graduate Certificate in Intelligence Analysis provides you with a theoretical and practical foundation with a best practice approach to intelligence. This course is ideal if you’re currently or wishing to work as an analyst in the national security, law enforcement, regulatory or private sector contexts. You will study topics with a focus on the foundation principles of intelligence, intelligence and analytics, and operational intelligence. This course can be completed in one year of full-time study.

Reasons for studying CSU’s intelligence analysis program

- Study with the school offering Australia’s only dedicated intelligence and counter-terrorism postgraduate courses.
- Take advantage of extensive networking opportunities with industry professionals.
- Enjoy the freedom and flexibility of studying when and where it suits you.
Career opportunities

Consolidate your strategic leadership and influence the development and implementation of intelligence practices, policies and procedures. Lead the collation, analysis and reporting of intelligence information and prepare and present intelligence briefings. Analyse intelligence data including the identification and evaluation of emerging threats, opportunities, patterns and trends relating to the activities of prisoners, which affect the security and good order of the prison.

Admission requirements

To gain entry in the Graduate Certificate in Intelligence Analysis, Graduate Diploma of Intelligence Analysis or the Master of Arts (Intelligence Analysis), you will have a relevant undergraduate degree and/or demonstrated professional experience as an intelligence practitioner.

We accept applications all year, with offers made to the next available intake.
