

About Travis

Travis was a dedicated business advisor who always sought to develop himself, his staff and collaborate with his clients in nurturing their aspirations and needs.

He had a strong desire to create an exceptional client experience. He worked tirelessly and passionately to advise his clients in not only their business but their personal life. Travis understood that being an advisor involved immersing himself in his client's world to enable him to deliver superior service.

Travis was also passionate about supporting and encouraging staff to achieve their professional and personal goals. His belief that our people are our greatest asset led him to be a strong advocate in developing a positive, connected, supportive, caring and professional culture. His humble nature meant that success was always directed to team success. His legacy will be continued in those who he has coached and mentored.

On 1 July 2024, Travis achieved his aspiration of becoming a Partner at RSM Australia in the Albury office. His contribution to the leadership of the Albury office has become a part of his legacy.

Travis' greatest pride and joy however was being a husband to Lauren and father to Dax and Elka. He was a devoted husband and dad and is described by Lauren as "our warmth, comfort and security".

Travis is remembered as fun and endearing who was also humble, authentic, loyal, passionate and principled. His contributions towards building an exceptional public accounting practice will be forever appreciated and remembered.
